Brief Overview: We will first turn to the University Boulevard and pass through the Langley Park neighborhood where almost 90 percent of residents are immigrants – legal and illegal. It is one of the greatest concentrations of immigrants in the Washington metropolitan area – mostly Hispanic. These immigrants live well below state (or metropolitan) household income level. Poverty and unemployment rates are much higher than average. From the University Boulevard we will turn to Riggs road and arrive to the North Capitol Street – one of the four dividers of the Washington DC into 4 quadrants. We will be able to view the Capitol all the way to the heart of the city. Approach the Capitol we will first pass through relatively low income area of North Washington, but will soon enter already rehabilitated areas of the city center. The Washington DC, after almost 60 years of decay and population decline, has started to become a nation's hot spot for redevelopment and gentrification. All sections of the city are changing. The extent of change will be clearly visible when we reach the crossroad of Massachusetts Avenue and Capitol North Street. The new developments on our right are a testimony of this rapid change in the city – new high end apartment and office buildings replacing the old row housing for lower income people are visible everywhere. Recession does not seem to affect the ongoing trend of gentrification in Washington. On the left side of the crossroad of Massachusetts Avenue and Capitol North Street is the Union Station, built during city beautiful movement that influenced the development of Washington DC at the turn of the 20th – the monumental building surrounding the Mall - from the Capitol to the Washington Monument and further on to the Lincoln Memorial. On each side of the Mall, as well as along the Constitution and Independence Avenues, endless monumental buildings have been built throughout the 20th century. In the 21st century, the last building - museum of the American Indians - was built on the Mall. Still we are awaiting completion of the last addition to the Mall - Martin Luther King memorial still under construction. We will arrive to Tidal Basin from the East and depart the bus at Jefferson Memorial, we will then proceed on foot to the great waterfalls of the Roosevelt memorial, cross the Independence avenue to pass by Korean memorial to end our walking tour at Lincoln memorial (about 1 mile walk).
